In your issue of the 2d inst. (Mr. F. G. Chapman's des patch) I see that Colonel Devergaux's railroad detectives ged five trunks filled with a rebel mail. The facts are these:-Mrs. Bissell, Miss Bissell and Mrs.

Carter and child, having two passes from the War Pepartment giving them permission to pass to the Army of the Potomac, came to the picket lines on the Alexandria road. Not having permission for bagrage, they were sent to the office by the officer in charge of the picket post. The matter was brought before Colonel Grimshaw, then commanding the division; the baggage was searched and found to covisit of a large lot of new and old drosses, new dress patterns, boots, groceries and medicines. On the persons of the ladies were found a large lot of letters addressed to parties in Richmond and other points in the Confederate lines. Mrs. Bissell tried to bribe the lady who searched her to dostroy the letters. The party goods, baggage and mail were all sont under guard to Washington. As they came and went by tumpike, it is casy to conceive how efficient the railroad detectives were in this transaction. I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

Lanman's Dictionary of Congress. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD

WASHINGTON, March 4, 1864. Your Washington correspondent has made a statement respecting my "Dictionary of Congress" which is calculated to injure my reputation, and is without founds tion. He intimates that I have been attempting to swindle the government, and that many members of the House of Representatives changed their votes after they had ascertained my purpose. The resolution for adopting my work as a public document was passed by a vote of seventy-seven, while the rescinding vote was only seventy-one. It was known that some twenty of my friends were absent, and so my personal and political elemins jumped at the chance of giving me a blow. My supporters were made up of democrats, border States men and republicans, and I am not aware that a single one changed his vote against me. The warfare upon my work was inaugurated by personal enemies and by several extreme men, who became angry with me because I would not puit them in my historical record. Handreds of the very best men in the n-t have encouraged me in my undertaking, and I have been almost unanimously supported by the press, and the slightest deviation from my duty as an impartial writer of dry history would have forfetied my claim to the respect of intelligent men everywhere.

CHARLES LANMAN. swindle the government, and that many members of the
